

Thomas Quiter

FLICKERING MIDNIGHT YUCCA IN FULL BLOOM

Gazing into the fiery hollow of a bed of coals,

Sensing the chaotic destruction of existence,

I look up and see the embodiment of perfection.

Three stalks of white bell shaped flowers;

Lit by chaos and defying their backdrop of darkness;

As if they were virgin to the night.